Introduction

Our lives are all about relationships. We have relationships with parents and siblings. We have peer relationships. We have relationships with God. We have relationships with others that help us to bring new human lives into this world. We have relationships with God and the Holy Spirit, which guide us toward achieving parenthood. Our relationships with God and the Holy Spirit also help us to fulfill our destiny and to understand what our role will be as part of Humanity.

We all have a relationship with God's universe. Our universe sustains our existence as human beings. Our scientists work together to attempt to understand how the universe operates in order to achieve its ultimate goal of helping God to create human and non-human life and to sustain the existence of human and non-human life.

Our relationships revolve around God's mission for all of us. God expects us to be responsible with our sexuality so that we can bring human lives in the world by allowing God to create human life. A man and a woman will show intimacy for each other while connecting with God to convince God to conceive and to create a new human life.

We have to accept the responsibility of developing human life as part of the structure of relationships that we have in our daily lives. God and the Holy Spirit guide us to become successful spouses and to be successful parents. We all answer to God and the Holy Spirit when we need help with our relationships with our children. Our children are God's children. We answer to God whenever we deal with God's children.

Analyzing the complexities of relationships in the space age is possible. That can also be difficult. We must be willing to work with God and the Holy Spirit to resolve problems in our relationships with each other and with God.

We need to take an impartial analysis at all aspects of our relationships in order to understand why they succeed, why they are challenged, and why they fail.

God suffers when single parents or no parents are caring for his children. It hurts God when parents abandon their kids through a divorce or a separation. Many couples do not sense the pain that God endures when they end their relationships and marriages when God's children are involved.

We will now try to analyze all aspects of relationships in the space age.

Pre-Engagement Relationships

When do we need to begin to think about starting a pre-engagement relationship? When does God want us to begin to explore the process of finding a spouse that could lead to a marriage and to the conception, the birth, and the development of human lives? We have to understand that God oversees and sponsors premarital relationships. God helps a man and a woman that are involved in a premarital relationship to find each other and to learn to love each other. God helps us to find the right time to find the right spouse for any of us. God helps us to develop a premarital relationship when He feels that it is appropriate and right for us.

The main goal of a pre-engagement relationship between a man and a woman is to explore the potential of their relationship to work together to start a family and to live a life with each other. God connects with a man and a woman that is in a premarital relationship. God has a substantial interest in seeing success in a premarital relationship as it gives Him the opportunity to conceive, create, and to develop new human life.

Partners should think about the benefits, consequences, and goals of engaging in intimate sexual activity in a premarital relationship. The main purpose of sexual intimacy is for a man and a woman to work with God to conceive a human life. Engaging in sexual relations for other purposes, including the need to feel sexual pleasure, carries many risks that may injure the relationship. The ultimate consequences are the transmission of sexually transmitted diseases and an unplanned pregnancy.

Young adults feel peer pressure to begin a premarital relationship as early as in the high-school years. This type of peer pressure can accompany pressure from a young adult's family to begin the process of finding a young adult partner. Young adults can respond to this pressure in many ways. They can feel that the pressure gives them the green light to start a sexual relationship with a person of the opposite gender. They can believe that the sexual intimacy with a new partner would not carry any serious consequences. They would think that responding to peer pressure by engaging in sexual intimacy would be the best way for a peer group to accept them even though they do not understand the consequences that await them.

A man and a woman in a premarital relationship should see family planning counseling when they are unsure as to whether they should engage in sexual intimacy before they are married. They should come to understand whether consummation is necessary to complete the bond between them. They may also have other issues about using birth control and the fear that the relationship might end after a few sexual encounters. Psychotherapists can help a couple to understand their options and to be responsible in the decisions that they will make about their sexual activities.

Can sexual intimacy be exploitation? A man can get a high out of having sexual encounters with his girlfriend or fiancé. He might find a way to prevent his fiancé from getting pregnant. Does a woman feel pain or exploitation when she engages in this type of sexual activity before marriage? It is more than likely that men exploit women that engage in sexual behaviors without producing a pregnancy. This kind of problem can deeply injure women during sexual encounters outside of a marriage. Men do notice this until the relationship until the relationship ends.

Engagement Relationships

When is the best time to for a man to propose marriage to a woman? God can put pressure on a man in a premarital relationship to pop the question. God has a big say as to whether a man will or will not propose to a woman in a relationship.

God's goal is to unite men and women into marriages so that He can fulfill his ultimate purpose of creating and developing human life. God puts insurmountable pressure on the man in the premarital relationship to buy a diamond ring and to beg a woman to say yes when he asks the sacred question, "Will you marry me?" Men do not know how God pressures them. A man is not always aware that his relationship with God is guiding him in his relationship with his girlfriend. God uses a special type of guidance to help a man and a woman to make the decision to plan to bond into marriage.

Do a man and a woman need to consummate their relationship before they are married? Women are under a lot of pressure to perform for their boyfriends in this society. Men sometimes demand sexual activity from their girlfriends as a condition to maintain the relationship in good standing. Sometimes, women have to deal with birth control issues before they are engaged to be married. Consummation can be a single sexual encounter or it can be a series of sexual encounters. The more sexual encounters that happen, the greater the chance that you will provoke an unplanned pregnancy. A couple does not really gain anything special from consummation. The worst consequence from consummation is an unplanned pregnancy.

What are the issues that couples discuss at the beginning of an engagement? They discuss plans for their wedding. They discuss the period for the wedding. They discuss their plans to have children. They also have to consider their financial situations. They need to understand how that will affect their abilities to care for their children.

What role does contraception play in an engagement relationship? What does contraception actually seek to achieve? How does the use of contraception affect your relationship with God? Couples are free to engage in sexual intimacy in a relationship whether or not they are married or engaged. The use of birth control is popular. A man and a woman attempt to conceive a human life with God during sexual intimacy. Birth control tries to stop God from creating a human life inside of a woman during sexual intimacy between a man and a woman. A couple tries to work with God to conceive human life and tell God that they do not want a new human life at the same time. The use of birth control devices to stop God from creating new human lives.

A couple must determine the pros and cons of working with God throughout the engagement in a way that will not hurt each other or hurt God. God wants all engagements to succeed. God wants all couples to have children.

God is a bond that exists between all unmarried and engaged men and women

Marital Relationships

God and the Holy Spirit work with a newlywed husband and wife to begin to adjust to a life of being married. The Holy Spirit guides the couple as to how to live with one another. God helps the couple to resolve their conflicts responsibly. A man needs guidance from a higher power in order to understand the complexities of living with woman for the first time. God also has to guide a woman in dealing with male issues in a marriage. God has a presence in a marriage because of their commitment to God to conceive and to develop human life.

All couples must develop a budget. How do they develop a budget without babies? How do they develop a budget with babies? They have to develop an economic survival plan. The plan changes when they start a family. They may not realize the Higher Powers in the background that are trying to help them.

All couples need to develop a timetable for intimacy. They have to decide whether to try to conceive a human life, to abstain for sexual activity, or to engage in sexual activity and to use birth control. God sees any campaign of sexual intimacy as a repeated series of opportunities to create human life. A man in the marriage might see a series of sexual encounters with his wife as a way to release sexual energy. A wife may feel that it is her obligation to submit to the sexual desires and sexual needs of her husband regardless of whether they want to have children now.

The questions are basic. Does a repeated and long-term use of birth control hurt women? Does God tolerate a campaign of sexual activity between a man and a woman where birth control has successfully stopped Him from creating a human life? Sometimes, men do not take these types of issues into consideration when they give their wives ultimatums about sexual activity. The ultimate punishment that men endure for offending God and their wives is a divorce.

Couples need to develop a timetable for a pregnancy and a human life. They need to plan how they will work with God to start a family. They do this by confronting God about how successfully to participate in the process of conception, childbirth, and the development of a baby and toddler. God works with parents-to-be in the background to help them to make the right decisions about bringing a baby into this world.

A husband and wife should have a successful way of mediating conflicts between themselves. They should know how to resolve their issues between themselves. They should know when to get professional help when their conflicts become a burden on the livelihood of their kids. Professional counseling is a good idea for a husband and wife that have conflicts that could end their marriage. They would not really want their marriage to end in a divorce.

A husband and wife must find God and the Holy Spirit in their relationship in order to find guidance, strength, and intelligence so that they can live the life that God wants them to live. They must come to peace with God and with the Holy Spirit in order to fulfill their destiny, to succeed as parents and married persons, and to make their contributions to Humanity, as God would desire. Parents must work with God and the Holy Spirit to develop their babies, toddlers, and young adults.

Parenting Relationships

God creates all of our children in His image and likeness. All of our children are equal in the eyes of God. God creates human life with the intent that human life will succeed as part of His Human Family. A child's parents are responsible for bringing their children into the world. They are responsible for developing their children to be successful and productive members of Humanity. Parent's children are God's children. All parents answer to God when it comes to their children.

Parents work with God and the Holy Spirit to teach children the fundamental tasks of human life. That include speaking, socializing, reading, walking, thinking, and communicating. God and the Holy Spirit have special relationships with their babies and toddlers. The goal of God, the Holy Spirit, and parents is to develop a new baby into a high-functioning toddler.

God and the Holy Spirit help parents to engage in constructive discipline for their kids. Kids need to learn the difference between right and wrong. Kids need to know that no one will tolerate their misbehavior. Kids need to experience discipline that will help them and not hurt them. God and the Holy Spirit try to guide parents and educators as to how to discipline our kids without hurting them. Hurting kids through discipline defeats the purpose of disciplining them all together.

Parents need to teach children to pray at a very young age. Parents need to make sure that children learn how to connect with God and the Holy Spirit from the time that they start going to school. This maximizes the chance that our kids will grow up to become a productive member of Humanity. God wants to create a dialogue with all of our kids. The Holy Spirit wants to see young kids talking to God. God and the Holy Spirit want to have a big role in our children's lives so that they will not face the criminal justice system as young adults or as adults.

Parents should teach their toddlers and children about God and the Holy Spirit. The way that kids learn about God varies from religion to religion. Nevertheless, it is so important that we should teach young toddlers and children about the Laws of God and about what God expects from our kids. Our kids need to know what God does, what the meaning of God is, and what the purpose of God is. Our kids have to understand that God has a presence in their lives.

Children should work with God to develop social skills in daycare centers from the time that they are toddlers. God teaches social skills to all of us. It is so important that we should train young toddlers and young children to socialize with their peers under the guidance of God and the Holy Spirit so that they have an excellent chance of developing into sociable children.

Parents need to look to God and to the Holy Spirit for guidance in how to understand and to resolve the issues that they face as parents. Raising young toddlers, children, and young adults can be extremely stressful for many parents. They may encounter many types of behavioral problems that they may feel that they cannot handle. God and the Holy Spirit can help these parents. Professional counselors can also help parents that have reached a dead end in dealing with misbehaving toddlers, children, and young adults. Parents should look to God and the Holy Spirit as the primary source of relief from the stress, pain, and suffering of dealing with kids that have behavioral problems. God will guide parents in getting kids that have behavioral problems the help that they need.

Sibling and Peer Relationships

God has a role to play in the development of toddlers, children, and young adults. God works through a child's parents in order to get him or her help in a time of crisis. A crisis can be any decision that a child and/or a young adult has made to be destructive to himself or herself and/or to others. Children need help from their parents, educators, and special behavioral health doctors and therapists when it becomes clearly apparent that a child or young adult is a threat to himself and/or a threat to others.

Positive peer pressure encourages healthy and safe behaviors that contribute to the livelihood of the community. Positive peer pressure promotes healthy attitudes and thinking among our children and young adults. Positive peer pressure encourages our children and young adults to reject alcohol, tobacco, illegal street drugs, and weapons. Positive peer pressure helps our children and young adults to understand the dangers of using firearms, drinking alcohol, and using illegal drugs.

Negative peer pressure does the opposite. Negative peer pressure encourages our children and young adults to smoke tobacco, to drink alcohol, to use illegal street drugs, and to use firearms.

Parents and educators are responsible for seeing the warning signs that something has gone wrong with a student. Parents should discover that a child and/or young adult has been smoking or using drugs even before they arrest him or her for it. It is the parents' responsibility to impose severe discipline upon their son or daughter for the way that they have been using illegal substances and/or firearms.

Parents are responsible for removing negative peer pressure from the life of a child and/or young adult. Parents should see the bad influences that are present in the young adult's peer group. Parents should do everything that is possible to protect their children from the kind of destructive peer pressure that can lead to failure in school and to a life of crime and incarceration.

God and the Holy Spirit will struggle to help families to cope with a young adult's peer group that engaged in putting bad peer pressure on their son or daughter. God and the Holy Spirit work with parents, educators, and behavioral health doctors and therapists to correct the damage that negative peer pressure has inflicted upon a young adult's life.

Young adults sometimes feel peer pressure to enter into a sexual relationship without being married. Raping, molesting, and/or sodomizing a young adult boy or girl that is under the age of eighteen years old is illegal. Young adults that are under the age of eighteen years old do not have any reason to become sexually active. Young adults in college also have trouble justifying a decision to become sexually active. Responding to that type of peer pressure can result in an unplanned pregnancy, the transmissions of sexually transmitted diseases, and/or the development of severe behavioral problems such as chronic depression and bipolar disorder.

God wants our young adults to become sexually active when they are ready to conceive and to develop a human life. God's influence over our young adults is supreme. Negative peer pressure has no place in a young adult's life when it requires a young adult to hurt a sexual partner and to hurt God.

God and the Holy Spirit guide all of our children and young adults in sibling and peer relationships. They supervise the activities of our kids and young adults. God and the Holy Spirit are the first to know whether our kids or young adults are abusing alcohol, tobacco, and/or street drugs. God and the Holy Spirit work in the background to discipline our kids severely for hurting themselves with these types of substances. The Holy Spirit tries very hard to get our students substance abuse counseling and rehabilitation services as soon as our students need those services.

It is so important to teach our students that they should reject any peer group that requires them to use tobacco, alcohol, illegal street drugs, and/or firearms. Community forums can educate our students in the dangers of using illegal controlled substances. Law enforcement seminars can show our students the ultimate consequences of repeated episodes of substance abuse and abuse of firearms.

Our schools should develop family planning training and counseling services for our young adult students. This is especially true for our young adult girls. Young adult girls should get special training and counseling before they can decide whether to engage in sexual activity with their partner. These girls have to understand the consequences of under aged sexual activity. They must understand the risks that are involved when a contraceptive device might fail and that might result in an unplanned pregnancy. They should see a movie about an abortion surgical procedure so they can see how what it looks like to destroy a fetus through an abortion. A girl's mother should be involved in any effort to allow the under aged girl to use contraceptive devices.

We want our peer groups to accept us. Acceptance into a peer group should be a positive experience. The requirements to enter into a peer group should be constructive and realistic. The peer group should not ask anyone to engage in activities that are harmful to oneself or that are harmful to others. Peer groups cannot ask a member to betray his or her relationship with God by requiring the member to use firearms to injure others.

Peer groups can be productive. Peer groups in our schools can enhance the experience of learning. Peer groups can also hurt us dearly.

Our younger siblings will look up to older siblings as role models. Our older siblings do not want to set an example of being substance abusers or firearm experts to their younger siblings. Older siblings have a responsibility to make sure that they guide their younger brothers and sisters to have a high standard for their behaviors.

Siblings work with God and the Holy Spirit to engage in positive peer relationships and activities. Siblings do not always know that God loves them and that God is doing everything that He can to help them to grow up to be a productive part of Humanity.

God and the Holy Spirit want the crises with our peer groups and our siblings to be resolved as soon as we notice them. Parents, teachers, and behavioral health doctors and therapists must work together with God and the Holy Spirit to give our troubled young adults the maximum chance of surviving negative peer pressure, peer group rejection, and the temptation to use illegal drugs, tobacco, alcohol, and/or firearms.

God and the Holy Spirit feel happy when they have rescued our children and young adults. They feel sad and hurt when our young adults experience incarceration and punishments for their crimes and sins. Our kids and young adults should stop hurting themselves and others for the last time.

Broken Relationships

Broken Premarital Relationships

There are times when an engaged couple will reach a point where they will feel that they are incompatible with each other while they during their engagement but before they get married. Many mistakes can lead to the end of an engagement.

A man might persistently demand sexual activity with his fiancé while using birth control. Some women might see that as exploitation. Others might believe that it is the woman's obligation to submit to her fiancé when it comes to sexual activity.

Sexual activity and abuse of birth control really does not accomplish much during an engagement and before marriage. Women may react negatively with frustration over repeated efforts to produce a pregnancy that would amount to wasted time. Every effort to produce a human life that ends in a missed opportunity to conceive a human life is a reason for a woman to become depressed. She may also become angry because of her failure to become pregnant multiple times while abusing contraception. Most women are sexually active mostly when they want to work with God and their partner to conceive a human life. A fiancé has to see the warning signs that a female partner is not happy with the arrangement of sexual activity and birth control if that is the case. Birth control normally has not medical benefits for women.

Sometimes, financial problems can be so severe that the engaged man and woman can feel that living together, having, and raising children might be unrealistic. Credit card debt, guaranteed student loan debt, car debt, and rental debt may all deter a couple from finding a realistic chance to live together comfortably with children.

Sometimes, either a man or a woman will have a bad attitude in the relationship. This might be true when a man wants to engage in sexual intimacy and the woman does not want that. The man can become angry and he can treat his fiancé with a bad attitude. The kind of bad attitude that comes from sexual exhaustion can deeply hurt a woman in a premarital relationship.

One must understand that women really only can engage in sexual activity during the three to five days of their ovulation. Sexual activity in other days of their menstrual cycle can make women feel pain.

Fighting is a consequence of threats to end the relationship. Fighting is a consequence of repeated efforts to engage in mutual sexual exploitation. Fiancés fight with one another when they are hurting each other even though they do not understand what they are doing wrong. Verbal threats can lead to domestic violence. Domestic violence can lead to arrests and criminal charges.

Some men want to retaliate against their fiancé for not satisfying their sexual needs and desires by engaging in infidelity. Forming a sexual relationship outside of the premarital engagement is a man's effort to end his relationship with his fiancé. Women who cannot keep up with a partner's sexual desires feel very hurt when they have to call off their engagement due to infidelity.

Sometimes a man and a woman do not notice incompatibility issues while they start dating. However, this may not be the case during an engagement. An engaged man and woman who are drifting closer to becoming man and wife may discover secrets about each other that might cause conflict in their relationship. Substance abuse problems, a past criminal history, psychiatric problems, and previous failed relationships are just some of the revelations that a woman may discover about her fiancé that might lead her to believe that she might be incompatible with him. Substance abuse problems and behaviors in previous relationships can also cause incompatibility conflict in a relationship. Finally, a detachment from God by either the man or the woman in the relationship may result in severe incompatibility between them. Incompatibility can become a reason for the collapse and the end of a premarital relationship.

Broken Marriages

Sometimes, either a husband, a wife, or their children will develop behavioral illnesses. Behavioral disorders can develop either in parents or in children. Behavioral disorders can lead a husband, wife, son, and/or daughter to become a threat to himself or herself and possibly a threat to others. A wife that has to deal with a spouse that has a behavioral disorder can become depressed. She can also fear for her safety at times when her husband might become self-destructive or violent. Children and young adult sons and daughters can put an unbelievable amount of stress on a marriage. The important thing to remember is that a husband, wife, mother, or husband must see the warning signs as soon as they become visible. A married couple has more to gain for trying to control the symptoms of their family's behavioral crises and disorders through medical therapy and psychotherapy than to walk away from their problems through a divorce.

Infidelity by a husband is an effort to give his wife a reason and an excuse to end their marriage. Infidelity is an effort to have sexual relations with someone outside of the marriage without the intent to conceive with that person. Infidelity breaks the marital contract and disgraces the wife and children in his family.

There might be some reasons why a husband might want to give his wife excuses to end their relationship. Some men do not feel that a woman sexually satisfies them. Some men feel that conflict within a family is too much of a burden for them. These men want to ignore their problems and to run away from what they are dealing with in their marriage. Most wives would rather forgive an unfaithful husband than to file for divorce. Most women would want to take a husband into counseling than to separate from him. Most women generally only end a marital relationship as a last resort.

It is a life threatening conflict when a husband and/or wife have substance abuse problems. Addictions to street drugs and alcohol can cause a man and a woman to face numerous incarcerations and broken work histories. A wife can only suffer when her husband has fallen apart because of substance abuse problems. Most marriages will end if their substance abuse problems are not resolved. Drugs treat an underlying illness. Our medical professionals have to discover the medical problem that cause substance abusers to need to take illegal street drugs. We must also find ways to save our marriages and families from the destructive nature of substance abuse. Saving a marriage and a family is worth more than any high that a substance abuser can achieve while using street drugs.

Domestic violence is a man's effort to injure a woman with whom he has certain type of relationship. A woman's threat to end her relationship with a husband or boyfriend is the main motivation for domestic violence.

Some men cannot understand the way that they persistently hurt women. Forcing women to abuse birth control, trying to have sexual relations with the woman without wanting to conceive, and abusing a woman in other ways all contribute to a woman's decision that she can no longer tolerate her relationship with her husband or boyfriend.

The misperception that men have is that domestic violence is the only way to deal with a woman that wants to detach themselves from them. They have no idea about how they have been persistently hurting their wife or girlfriend. They resort to violence against their wife or girlfriend as a last resort.

We need to teach men what does hurt a woman over time so that men will stop making the same mistakes that cause them to lose their girlfriends and wives all of the time. That is the most productive way to begin to end domestic violence.

Sexual activity without the intent to conceive seeks to accomplish absolutely nothing for a man and a woman. Repeated efforts to try to conceive a human life concurrently with a successful effort to prevent a pregnancy can continue to hurt a woman repeatedly over time. Men can find some satisfaction in trying to force women to submit to their sexual needs. That is fine until they wake up one day and find that the woman of their dreams is gone from their lives. They wonder what they had been doing wrong. This is a consequence of having sexual relations without the intent to conceive over a prolonged period. You may lose your wife or girlfriend if you engage in sexual activity for any other reason than to conceive a human life through intimacy and working with God.

Disagreements and violent arguments happen because of conflicts in the relationship between the husband and the wife. The conflict might have something to do with birth control. They may be having financial difficulties. They might not have come to a mutual agreement about their sex lives. They might get to a point where they do not understand each other at all.

They might not understand each other's feelings and needs. They might be hurting each other and may not know why it is happening. Violent arguments happen when a man and a woman want to hurt each other for whatever reason that might be. Marriage counseling can help the husband and wife to understand their issues. Counseling can help them to save their marriage and their family. They would want to do that for the best interests of their kids.

Sometimes, the wife or the husband repeatedly threaten to end the relationship. They may have their own reasons for persistently fantasizing about ending the relationship. Either the husband or wife will eventually attempt to leave under these repeated threats. Again, marriage counseling can help a husband and wife to understand why they want to separate and how to begin to resolve their issues.

Sometimes, a family can suffer a complete economic failure. Such a failure can put marriage-ending stress on a husband and a wife. The loss of a job due to an arrest for substance abuse or other crimes by the husband can convince a wife to leave. A husband would have a hard time in trying to explain how he could lose a job due to an arrest.

Many couples end their relationships because of irreconcilable conflicts. This means that they have given up trying to see common ground on their issues. A husband and wife may have thought that they understood each other while they were dating and engaged. What causes them to become incompatible after they become married?

Unfortunately, a husband and wife sometimes become married without knowing who each other are. They might not know each other's darkest secrets. They might not understand their own strengths and weaknesses. They may be getting married out of desperation while ignoring the consequences of what they have been doing by not understanding the complexities of who they are married before they say "I Do."

That kind of thinking disguises the true nature of a husband and wife. They only find out that they cannot stand each other after one or more children are involved. Nothing that a marriage counselor can do could help the situation at that point. The husband and wife then pay the price for getting married while they were partial strangers that did not know half of who they throughout their engagement.

Any threat by a husband or wife that involves the use of weapons is grounds for an immediate separation. That is when a marriage can become very dangerous. It is a threat to a wife's life to live with a husband that can use a weapon to threaten her during an argument. That is when a divorce is possibly justified.

Sometimes, either the husband, the wife, or both the husband and wife are suffering from a detachment from God. Their kids can also exist in a state of detachment from God if one or both parents exist in a state of detachment from God.

Parents have to respect the fact that children are God's creation. Parents must work with God to conceive, give birth to, and to develop human life. The father and the mother of kids cannot persistently ignore the existence of God. They will suffer through life-threatening conflict if they persistently reject God's efforts to communicate with the parents and the kids in the family.

This type of detachment can lead to very life-threatening behavioral problems with both of the parents and their kids. They do not know what the problems are that are causing the misbehavior if they do not understand that they are trying to raise a family outside a relationship with God.

This means that they will train kids to believe that they can commit any sin or crime without answering to God and/or to the Holy Spirit. It means that the kids will grow up without learning about God at all. They will have no understanding about the laws of God. They will have no ideas about the difference between good and evil.

Parents that teach children and young adults to ignore God face conflicts that can end their marriages. God punishes agnosticism in a family. Agnosticism is a long-term effort to ignore God. It is an effort to pretend that God does not exist in our lives.

These conflicts can become very severe. They can become so severe that they may cause the destruction of the marriage of such a family. We must always answer to God and to the Holy Spirit when we are raising children with a spouse. We will lose our spouse and kids if we practice agnosticism by ignoring God in our family lives.

Repairing Broken Children

There are times when our children can become severely ill. It can devastate parents when doctors diagnose their children or young adults with a behavioral disorder or a substance abuse addiction disorder. The stress that can erupt in a household between parents that must cope with a child or young adult that has a behavioral disorder can be overwhelming.

We must develop projects, programs, and support mechanisms to help the parents of our troubled kids and teenagers to get help and intervention services in order to save their lives. Parents can rely on behavioral health professionals such as psychiatrists, psychologists, psychotherapists, and clinical social workers to help them to deal with a sick child or adolescent.

There are many ways to establish early child and adolescent early intervention programs when parents first detect the signs of chronic behavioral problems in children and/or young adults. We must find help for these kids in order to maximize the chance that they will grow out of their behavioral disorder and will become a constructive part of the human race.

What are the causes of behavioral disorders in children and adolescents? There are times when children and adolescents feel the stressors of their lives so intensely that they just regress into the symptoms of behavioral disorders. We will examine some of those stressors now.

Puberty Blues

Children can become sick when they enter into puberty and young adulthood. Raging hormones can put an unbearable amount of stress on our young kids in grammar schools, middle schools, and high schools. Peer pressure that encourages our kids to form premarital relationships before they are ready and able to work in order to support a family can be detrimental to a young adult's psychological development. Boys and girls can drift closer to making a decision about becoming intimate with a partner. That can cause emotional instability and conflict with parents. Subsequently, Behavioral disorders may afflict our young kids and young adults because of the conflicts that come with preparing for parenthood, dating, and sexual activity.

Raging Hormones

Raging hormones can put an unbearable amount of pressure on our young adults to engage in sexual activity. Our young adults can become determined to engage in sexual activity if the hormones that drive sexual activity in their bodies peak in their bloodstreams for no reason repeatedly over time. Young adults may face what we call unstimulated and unprovoked sexual arousal. Arousal that happens for no reason as the result of raging hormones can cause a young adults male and/or female to become interested in a sexual relationship with a partner of the opposite gender. Young adults can possibly become desperate for sexual activity if unprovoked arousal continues to be a problem throughout the teen years and the college years.

Illegal Street Drugs Are Bad for You

Substance abuse is the leading cause of broken children. Most of the children and young adults that are hooked on street drugs do not know how they are ruining their lives with the dope that they are using. We should force all of our kids and young adults to attend seminars, lectures, and counseling programs in order to teach them about the dangers of illegal street drugs, alcohol, tobacco, and firearms. An educated young adult is far less likely to use dope than a young adult that has no idea about what he and/or she is doing with the bad drugs. We have to teach kids to reject smoking, drinking alcohol, using illegal street drugs, and using firearms from the time that they are in the second grade. That is the best way to prevent them from becoming broken children and broken young adults.

Drinking Alcohol Can Hurt You Really Badly

Our kids have to become aware of the consequences of drinking alcohol. They should learn about what happens to young adults and adults that drive under the influence of alcohol. They should see what happens to alcoholics that cannot not stop abusing alcohol. Our young adults have to understand that they have the option of rejecting involvement in any peer group that promotes the illegal consumption of alcohol by minors. Special counselors should talk to our kids about what the benefits of drinking alcohol are as opposed to what the consequences of drinking alcohol are. Our educators have an obligation to our children and young adults to keep them informed about the threats that they face if they abuse legalized controlled substances such as alcohol.

Smoking Can Kill You

Educators have an obligation to our young students in the first, second, third, and fourth grades to warn all of them about the dangers of smoking tobacco. It should be the goal of all grammar schools to convince all of our children completely to reject tobacco before they reach young adulthood and when they reach young adulthood. Kids should become aware of the problems that come along with smoking. Smoking leaves a bad odor all over your body. It is hard for others to socialize with you if you smell like tobacco. Smokers have serious hygiene problems. Last, but not least, smoking can cause someone to develop cancer, which can kill you. Smoking is not worth the effort if it means that you will be dying an early death because of the cancer that it will cause for you. Our children and young adults need to understand these things about abusing tobacco.

Academic Setbacks

Even our most gifted students can sometimes suffer from academic setbacks. Some students fall behind in their studies for various reasons. It is important to realize the stressors that exist in a child's life or a young adult's life that may be causing a crisis in the student's ability to perform in the classroom and in school. Behavioral disorders can hurt a student's ability to perform in school. A student with a behavioral disorder can become antisocial and can lose track of his or her obligations to achieve success in their educations. There are many things that educators and parents to help students who have suffered academic setbacks. Students can get medical treatment by behavioral health professionals. A student can engage in extracurricular study activities. Academic reward programs can motivate a struggling student to put in a maximum effort in order to work toward their goals. A part time study plan during the summer recess could also help the student to develop better study skills and a better ability to stay in touch with his or her peers. Academic setback force educators, parents, and counselors to help our kids and young adults to remove their obstacles to success in education. They will succeed if we believe that it is what is in their destiny to do so,

Juvenile Early Warning Signs

There are times when our children and/or young adults may try to do something that is irrational, destructive, and/or hurtful to themselves and to others. It is so important that adults and educators should recognize the warning signs that a child and/or young adult is in a state of mind where he might want to do something horrible to himself, herself and/or to others. Sometimes it is hard to conclude that a child or young adult needs behavioral health treatment when parents and educators discover that he or she poses a threat to himself or herself and poses a threat to others. The goal for our kids is to get them help before they will go over the edge and attempt to do something that will be unthinkable. We have to work with our kids and young adults at the first sign that they have behavioral problems. We do not want our kids to wind up in prison for the rest of our lives. We want our kids to continue to remain as part of God's human family. That is why we must treat our kids for behavioral disorders when they are either children and/or young adults. We must stop allowing our kids to destroy themselves and facing incarceration. That is not fair to our students and to God.

Detachment from God and the Holy Spirit

We all answer to God and to the Holy Spirit in one way or another. Our relationships with God drive our ability to maintain our families, to work, and to raise our children. God gives us our talents and our abilities to work and to function. God expects us to have a powerful relationship with him because we are all his children. However, sometimes our children and young adults try to ignore the existence of God. They fail to recognize the love that God has for all of us. They then believe that they can hurt themselves and others without facing God's discipline. They think that the Holy Spirit will continue to tolerate their efforts to hurt children, young adults, and adults. They can do destructive things while having no consideration for the way that they are hurting God. This could lead to a psychiatric incarceration or a criminal incarceration. It is so important to teach our kids that they have to recognize the existence of God and the Holy Spirit in their lives. They have to understand how to communicate with God through prayer. They also have to understand That God will guide them to do right things and will discourage them from doing bad things. Our educators and parents must stop our children and young adults from suffering a detachment from God and the Holy Spirit.

Lockdown Recovery Programs

There are times when our children and young adults face unspeakable terrors and horrors in on the grounds of their schools. This happens because teachers, parents, and behavioral health professionals could not see the warning signs that one student was becoming a threat to himself and/or to others. The government should have crisis teams that include behavioral health professionals such as psychiatrists, psychologists, psychotherapists, clinical social workers, and grief counselors that would be on call in the event of a tragedy in a school. Kids and young adults that witness horror in our schools should get unlimited behavioral medical treatment, psychotherapy, and support from peers and from the community in which they live. Psychiatrists should not be afraid to give kids medications to help them to function after a catastrophic school tragedy. Psychologists and psychotherapists would help parents and teachers to cope with their grief. Federal officials could dispatch Scholastic Crisis Intervention Teams to schools that have suffered a catastrophic event. Their goal would be to restore the level of functioning of our students, our teachers, our families, the members of our community, and the law enforcement officials that must rebuild after dealing with such a tragedy.

Extra-Learning and Development Program

Students might voluntarily want to attend special seminars that would be related law enforcement, religion, politics, the criminal justice system, and topics that they are studying in their schools. They can attend these seminars during the summer vacation and during their free time during the school year. Online tutoring programs would give students affordable tutoring after school, during the weekends, and in the summer if a student wishes to take advantage of the training. They should require all students in all grammar schools to take seminars about the dangers of using alcohol, illegal street drugs, tobacco, and of using firearms. They should teach students about these dangerous behaviors right from the time that they are in the second and third grades. Extra-learning programs would help students to learn more skills than they have been learning in their coursework. Other students can work on sharpening their skills by learning and reviewing the skills that they are having difficulty in understanding.

Family Planning Counseling Programs

Online family planning seminars would help our young adults the risks and dangers of under aged sexual activity between a young adult boy and a young adult girl. The online courses would explain the processes of intercourse, conception, pregnancy, childbirth, and caring for a new baby for the first six weeks. These courses would explain exactly how birth control (contraception) actually tries to prevent a pregnancy during sexual intimacy. This training should also discuss the eventual consequences of repeatedly engaging in high-risk sexual behaviors. All young adults that are in grammar schools, middle schools, and high schools should have access to free family planning counseling if they are considering participating in sexual activity with a partner. Young adults need to understand the risks and the hardships that are involved in starting a sexual relationship as students that are under the age of twenty-two years old. The man and woman might also want to see a behavioral health counselor to determine whether a sexual relationship for them is appropriate since they would still be undergraduates in grammar schools, middle schools, high schools, and colleges. The main goal is to make sure that neither of the partners feels any kind of psychological, emotional, or physical injuries, pain, and suffering during the process of sexual activity.

Criminal Justice Seminars and Counseling

Criminal Justice Seminar Programs would help high-risk juvenile children and young adults to get training and counseling about the way that the criminal justice system works. Trained public defenders and police officers would help to counsel these juveniles about the difference between what is legal and what is not legal. These kids need to learn about the dangers of using illegal drugs, drinking alcohol, smoking, and using firearms. These special officers and public defenders would help kids to stay off street drugs and to try to live an honest life. These seminars and counseling efforts would be intervention programs that work to save the lives of our kids. These kids might otherwise face a lifetime of incarcerations in prisons and correctional facilities. We want our kids to part of Humanity. We do not want our kids in incarceration.

Vocational Development and Certification Programs

These programs would teach our young adults valuable job skills whether or not they want to pursue a college career or want to work right out of high school. It is important for young adults to begin to understand what it means to be able to perform in a job. Computerized vocational assessments can help our young adults to find the career path that is the best suited for them. They can then decide where they will find the skills and certifications that they will need in order to pursue their careers as high school or college graduates. These types of vocational assessments can help high school students to choose what major would be right for them. High school Online Vocational Certification Programs can help students to prove that they have the skills that they need to perform in a job. These online vocational training programs would be available to our students at low cost and would be accessible to everyone that would have a computer with an internet connection. We hope that these programs will help are students to have added advantages as they recover from setbacks and problems from their past.

Community Service Programs

Young students that have been a threat to themselves and to others would benefit from performing in Community Service Programs. High-risk students must understand that they are part of the community. Forcing our troubled children and young adults to perform community service would be the best therapy that we could give them. We could show them how much the community cares for them and that they are welcomed as part of the community. Our students must understand that they should never try to hurt the community by hurting themselves or by hurting others. The members of a community attempt to live with each other peacefully. We injure the entire community when we have to arrest a child or a young adult for the commission of a crime. The last thing that any members of the community want is for any of our kids to face incarceration in a correctional facility or in a prison. Our communities want to stop producing broken children. We want all of our children to be healthy and to continue to remain as constructive components of God's Human Family.

Young Adult Government and Corporate Internship Programs

We should challenge high-risk young adults to perform in temporary jobs where they will face discipline in a safe environment. Our troubled young adults sometimes carry a bad reputation with them that never wants to end. Government-sponsored internship programs can help these young adults to begin to develop a good reputation. This is part of the rebuilding process for our broken children. An exposure to a workplace is part of the way that we can rehabilitate our broken children so that we can make sure that they will always remain as part of our community.

Comprehensive Behavioral Counseling Programs

This government-funded program will insure that our children and young adults will get psychiatric, psychological, and family planning therapy and treatment from the moment that teachers and parents notice that the child might have developed a behavioral disorder or a behavioral problem. Each school should have a government-funded behavioral-health treatment team that would include a psychiatrist, a psychotherapist, and family planning counselors. They would work together to give immediate care to any and all children and young adults that may become ill with a behavioral problems and/or behavioral disorders. This treatment team would work with parents and educators.

Repairing Broken Families

Comprehensive Early Intervention Programs

A family can disintegrate many ways. Children and young adults can develop behavioral problems. These types of crises can overwhelm parents and siblings as well as other family members. Marital conflict that can lead to separations and divorces can put an agonizing strain on the children and young adults that are living in the household.

They should train Marital Relations Counseling Professionals to detect what the sources of conflict are between a husband and wife. Counseling would seek to resolve the sources of conflict and to convince the husband and wife to give the marriage a second chance. These special counselors would have the training and experience to work toward the goal of saving as many families as possible from collapse. These therapists should be available to consult with married couples regardless of their medical insurance status or their ability to pay for counseling.

Family Psychiatric and Psychological Counseling Programs

Families can sometimes face numerous crises when one or more family members has a psychiatric or behavioral disorder. That means that they have an illness that could cause to be a threat to themselves and/or a threat to others. This may be true of young children and young adolescents. This may also be true of adults, parents, and other family members. Either one family member or multiple members can make repeated efforts to hurt themselves and/or to hurt others because of untreated psychiatric disorders. A family member's untreated psychiatric disorder can lead to the disintegration and collapse of the family.

We must provide our young children and young adults psychiatric medical treatment when it is clearly apparent that they have abnormal behavior that would indicate that they have a behavioral illness. Parents and educators must work together to make sure that our students do not continue to hurt themselves or to hurt others. This is especially true in the family situation. Family members should seek psychiatric care before a marriage ends or a family breaks apart.

Substance Abuse Awareness Programs

The best way to help law enforcement to take illegal drugs off the streets is to educate our children and young adults about the dangers of dope and recreational drugs. Our parents have to warn our kids repeatedly about what our kids will face if they turn to a life of using alcohol and illegal drugs. Substance abuse is one of the leading causes of divorce and relationship failures in the United States. The best way to deal with the dangers of substance abuse is to convince our kids and young adults to reject the dope right at the beginning of their schooling.

Marital substance abuse treatment programs can help a husband and wife to rebuild their marriage and family after a husband or wife's battle with substance abuse. Their children should also be involved in efforts to get family member off dope and back on track to a normal life. Families must work with addiction treatment specialists in order to save their families and their marriages. Addiction treatment specialists are special doctors and other medical professionals that guide substance abusers to a life that is free of illegal drugs. Family members must follow a certain path in order to defeat the demon of substance abuse that can threaten to destroy their marriages and families.

Family Planning Counseling

A husband and wife have to decide when it would be the right time to try to conceive human life. However, a husband that persistently forces his wife or girlfriend to use birth control while they are waiting for the right time to attempt a pregnancy may cause conflict in the relationship. A woman is God's Factory of Human Life. The purpose of God's Factory of Human Life is to allow God to create human life. What happens when a boyfriend or husband abuses God's Factory of Human Life to exploit a woman solely for sexual pleasure without the intent to work with God to conceive a human life?

Men do not notice that something is wrong until the fights start. Then the threats of separation and divorce start to happen. Finally, there is a detachment between the husband and wife or the boyfriend and girlfriend. A husband or boyfriend that had been requiring his wife or girlfriend to submit to his sexual need while using birth control would not know what he did wrong.

Family Planning Counseling can determine whether a couple's attempted sexual activities and use of contraceptive that methods contribute to the level of conflict in their relationship. A family planning counselor can determine just what amount of sexual activity a couple needs. The counselor can help the couple to develop a timetable for conception and childbirth.

The real thing to remember is that sexual activity only really accomplishes anything when a man, a woman, and God work together to create a human life. God may become offended if a man and a wife try to get pregnant and try to stop God from creating a human life at the same time. That may also be grounds for the termination of the relationship.

Family planning counseling can help a couple to understand just how much sexual activity they need, and if they need very frequent sexual activity at all.

Religious Guidance Programs

Couples that are going through a marital crisis or a premarital couple that is seeing the possible end of their relationship should turn to their relationship with God for help. Certain religious leaders can train in marriage counseling and psychotherapy in order to bring God into a family's life when a family faces a complete collapse.

God and the Holy Spirit offer a wide range of resources that can help a husband and wife to work out their differences and to save their marriage and their family. God and the Holy Spirit are part of all of our lives. God wants His married husbands and wives to stay together for the rest their lives. God and the Holy Spirit want to help us to correct the bad attitudes, bad habits, and misunderstandings that a husband and wife give to each other that hurt their relationship. God and the Holy Spirit monitor all relationships that involve a man and a woman. They, at times, will intervene in a family crisis while no one that is involved will notice their intervention. God and the Holy Spirit work in mysterious ways to help our struggling families to survive hardships and to be constructive partners of God's Human Creation.

Relationships that conceive children are part of God. God wants all men and women that conceive human life to answer to Him. He does not want to tolerate separations and divorces. He wants to work with troubled families to do everything that He can to save marriages and families from collapse.

Child and Young Adult Support Programs

A family that is breaking apart can traumatize children and young adults. Children and young adults can begin to fail in school, start fantasizing about illegal drugs, may consider smoking, and may want to start drinking alcohol when they face a dangerous family crisis that will not end. The situation is more complicated when children reach adolescence. The pressures and the stresses of young adulthood can make it so much more difficult for behavioral health specialists such as psychiatrists and psychotherapists to try to save the family from a divorce and other problems.

Child and Young Adult Support Programs would make it perfectly clear to our children and young adults that they have to try to work hard with their parents in order to save their family. We want to warn our young adults that problems at home are not excuses for declining grades in school, experimentation with street drugs, using tobacco, using alcohol, or trying to obtain and use firearms. We should teach children and young adults to respect God and the Holy Spirit during a family crisis. Young adults should work with counselors to discuss their adolescent issues concurrently with the issues that the family faces in its crisis.

It is so important to keep our children and young adults functioning as well as possible until the family resolves its crisis. Child and Young Adult Support Programs will also encourage our children and young adults to find solutions to their problems through prayer and communications with God and the Holy Spirit. Our kids must know that God and the Holy Spirit love them and are there to help them through their hardships. The kids must understand that God and the Holy Spirit are intervening in their lives in order to save our kids' lives.

Group Support Programs

Certain husbands and wives that share common problems may meet together for group therapy. A psychotherapist and a religious leader would conduct the meetings of the adult men and women. A psychotherapist and a religious leader would preside over the group meetings. All of the members would discuss their individual issues with their peers. Their peers would give them feedback and support. The peers would also help each other to understand their problems and to find ways to possibly begin to resolve their problems.

The religious leader would help them to understand how God helps all of us. He or she would encourage the peers in the group to reach out to God and to The Holy Spirit for assistance and guidance. The religious leader would explain the goals of God and the Holy Spirit to the members of the group. The religious leader would encourage them to reach out to God and the Holy Spirit through prayer and the faith that God will help us to walk away from our problems once we have worked with God to solve them.

The group members have to understand that God watches over every family in the world. God wants our families to succeed. God feels the ultimate pain when our families fail. The participants in group therapy cannot just look at their own losses at the end of a relationship. They have to look at the losses of their children and of God. The groups' psychotherapists and religious leaders will help them to understand that.

Family Support Programs

Special Family Support Counselors will interview all members of a family, the husband, and the wife, to determine what is actually hurting the interrelationships within the family unit. They can then develop a treatment plan that will help them to give the family members advice about what they are doing right and what they are doing wrong. The family members will come to understand why they are hurting each other and what they have to do to stop hurting each other.

Family Support Programs will help children and young adults to reach out to God and the Holy Spirit for help in dealing with the problems within the family. Children and young adults may not know the underlying reasons for marital problems such as sexual problems between their parents. However, the kids have to support their parents' efforts to solve the family's problems through therapy, counseling, and medical treatment if it is at all possible and necessary.

Family Support Programs would include one-on-one therapy sessions with each of the family members that are involved in the conflict. There would also be meetings where all family members would meet as a group to discuss their issues openly with a Family Support Counselor. A husband and a wife would work to try to stop dangerous misbehavior on the part of their children. Parents would learn how constructive discipline in the family could best benefit them and their children.

Family Support Counselors in our schools would make sure that our kids and young adults would not be struggling in school because of family conflicts at home. Family Support Counseling should be available free-of-charge at any school for any student that needs to talk about problems within his or her family.

The main goal of Family Support Programs will be to save our families from self-destruction. Our goals will be to preserve our families and to make sure that our family environments are free from negative conflict that can hurt our kids and other members of our households. Family Support Counselors would work with the guidance of God and the Holy Spirit to fulfill the missions of Family Support Programs.

A New Era in Human Relationships

Finding God and the Holy Spirit

Finding God and the Holy Spirit in our lives is the first step for all of us toward achieving a new era of human relationships and human accomplishments in the space age. God and the Holy Spirit can guide us to create super-human technologies and accomplishments. God can help us to find love in our lives with a spouse that is right for us. We can find God through prayer and through a special type of communication that only God understands. We all answer to God and to the Holy Spirit. They are there to love us and to help us to be constructive parts of humanity. God and the Holy Spirit are everywhere. We have to believe that we can find them. We have to believe that they can help us in our relationships and in our families. Sometimes they will help us with our problems without our knowledge or consent. It is a very good thing when we find God and the Holy Spirit.

Discovering That We Are All the Same

God creates all of us equally in His image and likeness. We are all part of one human family. There really is no such thing as race that separates one of us from any other one of us. We are all human beings that function as part of the God that has created us and that supports our existence in His Universe. We are all brothers and sisters that have a common goal: We must work with God to cultivate human life here on the Planet Earth. We must work with God to solve the problems that contribute to the pain and suffering of human life. We must work with God to find a lasting peace for all of us.

The War of Good versus Evil

Unfortunately, there are individuals that seek to destroy human life within God's Human Family. Evil exists as a force that convinces people like you and me to injure and to destroy human life. A hurtful force exists within many parts of Humanity. God has been trying to fight and to defeat evil for thousands of years. The existence of an entity in God's universe that seeks to destroy human life indefinitely with no consideration for the suffering of God is something that the Good Forces of Humanity have to defeat. The Forces of Good will one day defeat the Forces of Evil. Death will end and eternal life will begin. We have to have faith in our relationships with God and with the Holy Spirit in order to make this dream a reality.

Everlasting Life

We should work with God and the Holy Spirit to try to stop death within Humanity. We should find ways to convince God that death is no longer necessary on His Human Planet Earth. That is a tough argument to sell to God. Nevertheless, it is part of the dream of a new era or relationships in the space age.

Our Children's Children

We must do everything that we can to make sure that our children's children will have a better life than we have had. We have to make sure that they will not struggle as we have struggled. We have to work with our children's children to make sure that they will know how to face hardships responsibly so that they will have a better life. That is what God must want. That must be what the Holy Spirit wants to accomplish here with our newly created human beings.

The Role of God in Our Relationships

The Baby Basics

God helps babies to develop the ability to communicate with parents, siblings, other toddlers, and other persons. Parents do not know that a baby has a relationship with God that help the baby through its development into a toddler. God sometimes allows a parent to hear a baby's thoughts. God helps a baby to understand how to speak, how to understand the spoken language, and how to use his or her arms and legs. God also coaches new parents in how to take care of a baby's unique needs. The bond between the man, the woman, and God that worked to conceive the baby did not end with conception and childbirth. A mother, a father, and God, work together to develop a baby, which has no level of functioning into a toddler. God is part of the parenting experience even though mothers and fathers might not realize that.

The Toddler Basics

God works to help toddlers to develop social skills, to walk, to talk, to eat, and to understand the spoken language. All toddlers have a unique relationship with God. The parents also get coaching from God and the Holy Spirit because raising a toddler is part of their relationship with God. Parents struggle to help toddlers to understand constructive discipline. Toddlers learn the best social skills when the go to daycare to interact with other toddlers. Parents do not realize that God supervises everything that they do with their babies and toddlers. Some parents ignore the existence of God while they are raising their babies and toddlers. That could cause problems in a marriage that could ultimately lead to a divorce. It is very important to recognize the existence of God in your life when you are caring for a young baby or toddler.

Child Basics

God has a special relationship with each of his young children. God helps our kids to understand how to read and to understand mathematics in grammar school. God helps them to understand how to communicate with each other. God helps them to struggle to socialize in Kindergarten and in the lower grades. God also helps them to develop good writing skills. God is very upset when his kids to not say prayers in school. Nevertheless, all of our young students get supervision and help from God no matter where they are going to school or whether they are praying.

Young Adult Basics

Young adults start the long process of preparing to work with God to participate the process of conception with a partner of the opposite gender. God begins to help the young adult to understand his or her destiny. He or she comes to understand his or her unique talents and God's will for his or her future. The young adult begins to understand how to prepare to meet the pressures of existing as an adult husband or wife and as a parent with a job that they will need to support their family.

Adult Basics

God expects all of His adults to help him to fulfill His mission to create, conceive, to develop, and to raise human life into adults. God expects all of his adults to help him to create human life and to work with him to develop that human life responsibly. God encourages parents to have more than one child. God continues to help His adults to understand what they went through as babies and toddlers as a way to prepare them for the struggles and joys of parenthood.

Conclusion

God is present in all of our relationships for various reasons. God helps our parents to raise us. God helps us to raise children. God helps us to perform in school and in our jobs. God helps us to find a spouse and to show love for a spouse. God shows us how to show love for children and for others.

God and the Holy Spirit challenge us to achieve our destiny and our missions in life. They help us to find our goals and to achieve our goals. They show true and everlasting love for all of the members of Humanity.

God, the Holy Spirit, and the Forces of Good, are fighting an ongoing war against the Forces of Evil, which seek to destroy human life without God's consent and in violation of God's Laws that prohibit the destruction of human life by another human being. God exists in all of our relationships. However, some of us can become detached from God and can believe that we have an obligation and a right to injure and to destroy life. That is part of the conflict between good and evil.

We must reach out to persons that have become detached from God to a point where they fantasize about destroying themselves and about destroying humanity. They need psychiatric treatment. They also need religious counseling that will help them to understand what they are doing to hurt God and what they should do to try to make peace with God.

We must not allow any of our children to become detached from God. We must teach them to recognize the existence of God in their lives. We must teach them how to pray and to talk to God and to the Holy Spirit. We must allow them to understand that it is all right to allow God and the Holy Spirit to play major roles in their lives.
